DEAR EDITOR...

Congratulations

Congratulations on your "Annual progress edition," very well prepared and presented.

It was also pleasing to see that your paper still carries the "All America City" torch. Most civic minded merchants and business establishments are displaying the seal along with several thousand Torrance motorists. (s) Doug. "Dutch" Horlander.

STILL GROWING

Steel
begins
a new Century

Total annual steel production in the United States a century ago was less than 10,000 tons. In 1956, the total was 115,200,000 tons.

It's 100 years since two men — Henry Bessemer in England and William Kelly in Kentucky — came forth with a process that enabled men to make steel by the ton instead of by the pound.

These two men could not possibly have foreseen the miracles steel has wrought in the years since. . . . No more can we today accurately foresee what steel may contribute to man's progress in the century ahead.

This much we do know. Quantity production of steel touched off a succession of improvements in our way of life — stretching from the early steel plows and reapers that revolutionized agriculture down to the cyclotrons that smashed the atom.

At every step steel has made more things, better things, available to more people — keeping abreast of the rising population and the ever-improving standards of living.

Steelworkers, too, have grown rapidly — in numbers, in earnings, in stature.

Jobs in steel are good jobs. As the industry expands, there will be progressively better jobs. . . . more good jobs in steel and other industries before steel's second century is very far along.
